Among the Farmers

"SPEED THE PLOW."

Tax Time.

"Tax the people, tax with care,
Tax to help the millionaire;
Tax the farmer; tax his fowl;
Tax his hen and tax her egg,
And let the bloomin' mudsill beg.
Tax them just all you can.
This is, friends, the frequent plan.

"Tax his pig and tax his squeal,
Tax his boots, run down at heel;
Tax his horses, tax his lands,
Tax the blisters on his hands;
Tax him just all you can;
This is, friends, the frequent plan.

"Tax his plow and tax his clothes,
Tax the rag that wipes his nose;
Tax his house and tax his bed;
Tax the bald spot on his head;
Tax the ox and tax the ass;
Tax his "Henry," tax the gas;
Tax the road that he must pass
And make him travel o'er the grass;
Tax him just all you can;
This is, friends, the frequent plan.

"Tax his cow and tax the calf,
Tax him if he dares to laugh;
He is but a common man,
So tax the cuss just all you can,
This is, friends, the frequent plan."

Doukhobors.

(Biddeford Journal.)

The movement for the return of the Doukhobors from Canada to Russia has revived interest in this peculiar sect. It was in 1899, or thereabouts, that two specially chartered steamers made voyages from Russian ports to Canada, bringing seven thousand of these peculiar people. They were members of a religious sect which had been known in Russia for a century and a half. The name, Doukhobors, which means "spirit-wrestlers," was at first used contemptuously by the members of the Russian orthodox church, but like many similar names of ridicule it stuck, and the persecution which followed served only to establish the name permanently.

Writers on the subject have agreed that it is difficult to describe a faith whose adherents are for the most part illiterate peasants, who produce no books or writings, whose propaganda was carried on by word of mouth and for the most part secretly. The main tenets of their creed, however, are that all men are equal and that they should do good willingly and without coercion, and that, therefore, they have no need of government over them. They do not believe in a separate priesthood or in sacraments, or in any external observance of worship whatever. They refuse to go to war or carry arms, they will not take an oath in any form and they re-ject as idolatorous the icons and make no obeisance to their brethren of the orthodox faith. After years of persecution they were permitted to leave Russia on condition that they pay their own fares and under threat of banishment to Siberia if they ever returned.

Until accounts of their habits and ways of living were circulated in Canada before their arrival. Five thousand of them landed absolutely without money, and to add to their troubles they were at once quarantined for smallpox. Ignorant of the country and knowing no language but their own, their first year in Canada was a hard one, and that they finally won speaks for their determination in the face of obstacles which would have discouraged anybody except a Russian peasant. Not only did they live through those first lean years, but they overcame schism within their own ranks and lived down the bad reputation which followed upon the fanatical pilgrimage of naked men and women. Since the arrival of their great leader, Verigin, the record of the sect has been one of increasing contentment and prosperity.

At present these Doukhobors, who landed penniless twenty-five years ago, have much valuable land and livestock, grain and lumber mills, schools, shops, and big bank balances. They are natural farmers and they like village life. They live on communistic lines, do business by modern and approved methods, issue financial statements, have cooperative stores, buy necessities in carload lots and take advantage of all usages and implements of civilization which do not conflict with their religious beliefs. All in all, they constitute one of the most interesting communities in the world.

In spite of experience and environment, they are just as much Russian as they were when they arrived. They may be in Canada, but they are not of it except physically. Their schools follow the customs of Russia; they have made no contribution to the cultural or national life of the Dominion; they are not adaptable by nature or by choice. But they are thrifty, scrupulously clean and good farmers. For many reasons, Canada will be sorry to see them go, even though they were not promising raw material for the making of good Canadians.

Cranberries in Small Packages.

Real progress is being made by our farmers in orderly marketing and effective distribution. Cranberry growers on Cape Cod now are enjoying a novel but sensible way of getting their product into the hands of consumers. This new development the past year has "gone big." It is to put the berries in two-pound cartons, ready for sale in chain stores, fruit stores and the like. The man who thought out the idea got out 100,000 cartons, thinking they would be too many, but already the supply of cartons is reported gone. A Wareham man, J. J. Beaton, is credited with getting this selling plan before the public.

It was introduced with a view that the public had been educated to buying "package goods," instead of bulk, and was immediately accepted.

Lays 302 Eggs in a Year.

Peggy Bay State doesn't stop laying eggs just because she knows winter has come. She keeps right on with such success that the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station announced recently that she had hung up a new record for hens of the Rhode Island Red breed with an official production of 302 eggs in her first year as a layer.

Peggy is the product of ten years of breeding. From a flock of hens that laid an average of 144 eggs each ten years ago the station selective breeding has gradually eliminated many of the factors that limit egg production and has brought the average for Peggy and her ninety-nine sisters up to more than 200 eggs a year.

During the past few years thousands of black-tailed prairie dogs have been exterminated in the Colorado district through the systematic efforts of the local people under the direction of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture and the Colorado Agricultural College. On the many sloping hillsides in Douglas County the old chimneys of the vacated burrows of these prairie dogs are still visible. Swarms of bees have been discovered going in and out of these chimneys, and the buzzing in the enlarged cavities below indicates that honey is being stored there.

Forty-two per cent of the farmers feel that their financial difficulties are due to low prices of farm products; seventeen per cent attribute their condition to high taxes; eleven per cent to high costs for farm labor; ten per cent to high freight rates; ten per cent to high interest rates; six per cent to reckless expenditures during the boom period; and four per cent to too much credit.

A measuring instrument for attaching to an automobile by which the linear measurement of fields in various crops bordering on highways can be easily and quickly made has been devised by the United States Department of Agriculture. Successful experiments have been made with the instrument.

About eighty per cent of the corn crop in the United States is sold "on the hoof" in the form of hogs.

Do Not Be Fooled.

Quantities of worthless rock are sent annually to the University of Maine says Geologist Merrill. Mica and iron pyrites give people visions of great wealth, in the belief they have discovered a gold mine. Maine people are not alone in being led astray for other New England states have citizens who frequently send us samples which they think carry gold. Iron pyrites, for centuries known as "fools' gold," most frequently deludes people. Dr. Merrill points out how needless this is because they are easily distingnished one from the other. The color of gold and pyrites is different, the pyrites being brilliant and very hard, while gold is dull and remarkably malleable. However, scores of farmers have visions of great wealth when they find a piece of the sparkling material in their pastures. Mica, which is either white or black, is often stained with iron so that it looks something like gold. It also occurs frequently in sand, and in water gives a sparkle with a yellow lustre. These facts lead many people astray every year.

When the sand containing mica is placed in water and shaken, the sand will go to the bottom first and the "gold" particles will follow, whereas if the substance were real gold, it would sink to the bottom first, as it is so much heavier than sand.

Lumps of coal are often contained in Prof. Merrill's daily mail, accompanied by requests for analysis. In every case the information seeker explains that there is much of the same material near by, but on investigation, it is usually found that the source of the coal is a freight car. Sometimes, lumps are found on the seashore, where it has been cast up by the waves.

Gold exists in Maine, Dr. Merrill says, but in such minute quantities that it is hardly worth mining. Rings have been made from Maine gold, and in some places, it is said that there is gold enough so that a man by working hard could earn about fifty cents a day mining it. During the war, a great deal of feldspar came to the university, with the suggestion that it be used as a source of potash. There is potash in this rock, but the expense of deriving it is so great, that the method is of no use. It is much the same story with copper, lead and other metals. Do not contract bills with the idea of paying them from profits out of these "precious" metals and ores.

Capper Urges Organization.

The reason so many of the 24,000,000 farmers in this country are going out of business is because they cling to the American tradition of individuality and refuse to organize, Senator Capper of Kansas declared at the annual dinner of the Eastern States Farmers' Cooperative Exchange in Springfield, Mass.

"When the farmer sells," he said, "he sells to an organized market—a market organized to take speculative profits. When he goes into the market to buy, he buys from an organized market.

"The farmer is the only unorganized group in a highly organized business and industrial community. Because he lacks organization, because he lacks determining voice in the sale value of his commodity, the farmer gets but seven and one-half billion dollars for products for which the consumer pays twenty-two and one-half billions. For speculators, middlemen and transportation to collect a toll of fifteen billion dollars on that for which the farmer gets but seven and one-half billions is a tragic absurdity."

Senator Capper declared that although congress "will go just as far as it possibly can along sound and practical lines," only a fraction of the farmers' problem could be solved by legislation. The big remedy, he said, lay in the extension of cooperative marketing and buying exchanges and the gradual development of farmer-leaders who could hold their own in competition with leaders in the business world.

Pure Bred Cattle.

"My attention has been called to a statement made by Philip R. Park in his address before the Augusta Rotary Club recently in which he said that of the cattle owned in the state of Maine there were less than 2 per cent pure breds," said H. M. Tucker, chief of the division of animal industry of the department of agriculture.

"The number of pure breds owned in Maine is regrettably small, but I cannot let the above statement go unchallenged, as I do not wish to have it appear that the Maine livestock owners are quite as blind to the benefits of pure bred stock as Mr. Park's statement would lead people to think.

"It is, of course, impossible to state definitely the number of herds of pure bred cattle owned, but we have in this office 1,282 herds tabulated. Of this number 1,074 herds contain 11,728 head of registered cattle. Of the remaining 208 herds the number of animals was not reported. Assuming that these herds averaged five animals each would make a total of 12,768 head of registered cattle. This, of course, does not take into consideration the owners of one and two pure bred animals, and doubtless there are many herds of considerable size that I have not been able to get on this list.

"On the other hand, according to the last published report of the state assessors, there are 149,606 head of cows, 21,822 head of three-year olds, 27,415 two-year olds, 34,979 head of yearlings, making a total of 233,922 head of cattle owned in the state. There is no record of animals owned less than one year of age, and I think it is safe to assume this number will not exceed the number of pure breds of which we have no record. Taking these figures as above given, we have 5.4 per cent of pure bred animals in the state."

Value of Crops.

Value of the country's principal farm crops this year has been placed at $8,322,695,000. Revised figures of last year's crops placed their value at $7,449,804,000 and the 1921 crops at $5,629,548,000.

Production figures, revised on the basis of the latest and fullest information available, and the value based on December 1 farm prices, for the principal crops, follow:

Potatoes, 412,392,000 bushels and $339,322,000.

Hay (tame), 87,098,000 tons and $1,253,374,000.

Hay (wild), 17,528,000 tons and $127,603,000.

All hay, 106,626,000 tons and $1,390,267,000.

Maple sugar and syrup, 33,533,000 pounds and $7,780,000.

Cranberries, 610,000 barrels and $4,423,000.

Apples (tota), 196,770,000 bushels and $201,110,000.

Apples (commercial), 34,403,000 barrels and $95,979,000.

Loss in Live Stock.

That the automobile continues to steadily replace the horse in this state is shown in the thirty-third annual report of the board of state assessors which was issued recently. There were 104,786 horses in the state in 1923 as compared with 101,310 in 1923, a decrease of 3476, while the number of colts decreased from 3717 to 2709. The value of motor cars in the state in 1923 was $22 255,586 as compared with $21,461,990 in 1922, an increase of $793,596.

The report points out that not only was the number of horses decreased in 1923, but that there was a decline in every class of livestock. The livestock valuation showed a decrease of $960,868. Following are the figures on Maine livestock: Number of cows—1922, 149,706; 1923, 147,753; decrease, 1,953. Oxen—1922, 4927; 1923, 4539; decrease, 388. Three-year olds—1922, 21,822; 1923, 17,130; decrease, 4 692. Two-year-olds—1922, 27,415; 1923, 25,509; decrease, 1906; Year olds—1922, 34,979; 1923, 32,350; decrease, 2,629 Cattle of all kinds—1922, 238,840; 1923, 227,281; decrease, 11,568 Sheep—1922, 75,439; 1923, 72,998; decrease, 2441.

SOUTH PARIS

Mrs. Effie Matthews and daughter have moved to Norway.

The warm weather of the first of last week made South Paris people think they needed a "slush fund" to clear the streets.

The Universalist Sunday School orchestra played at the supper of Norway Universalist Ladies' Circle Wednesday evening.

Among the students to receive honors at the honor roll for the first semester of the year at Colby College was Miss Leota E. Schoff of this village.

A social get-together of the people of Deering Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church will be held at the church Tuesday evening of this week, with a covered dish supper.

George F. Eastman, who had been away for some weeks, most of the time at Southern Pines, N. C., arrived home Wednesday night. He is somewhat improved in health.

Roger Davis' window attracted considerable attention last week with its soft tinted, delicate fabrics. One woman was of the opinion, however, that it was improperly dressed it showed so much lingerie.

Mrs. Clarence G. Morton and daughters Miss Helen and Priscilla and Miss Julia P. Morton left for the South last Tuesday night. They will go first to Hampton, Va, thence to Southern Pines, N. C., and will be away some weeks.

Mrs. Jason G. Smith was severely scalded at her home last Monday morning by tipping over the teakettle, the injuries to her feet and legs being such as to require treatment by a physician, and confine her to the bed for some days.

For the W. C. T. U. meeting to be held with Miss Annie Edwards March 18, members are asked to be prepared to respond to roll call with clippings or thoughts either on the present cost of war, or on what the united Christian church might do to end war.

Hudson Knight, who has been ill for a number of weeks, is somewhat improved, and now sits up a little. Mr. Knight is well along in his ninetieth year, and is to be congratulated upon that vigor which allows him thus to rally from what seemed to be a serious illness.

Shaw's Orchestra will play Tuesday night for the "Hello Girls" in Norway, and on Friday night at Mechanic Falls. Howard has given up his trusty auto to make the latter trips. A snow boat is none too good for him now. With this, if the roads are impassable, he can take to the fields. It takes a lot of gas to run it, but the orchestra is sure to get there with it; and if anything, they can syncopate a little more jazzy after their ride in this boat than in an ordinary auto.

Following the next regular lodge meeting of the Rebekahs on March 14, the Rebekahs will hold an auction of sealed packages. Every Rebekah is asked to come and bring a package with the value of same marked on the outside. An invitation is extended to any who care to come to the auction at 8:30 in the Odd Fellows' banquet hall. Come and help the Rebekahs make this a success. A. D. Park, auctioneer. A card party will follow the auction. You are welcome.

One of the Grand Trunk officials best known in South Paris is James J. Foley, for many years roadmaster and so having charge of all the changes in the road bed near this village as well as other places. Mr. Foley was retired Wednesday night, having at that time completed forty-four years of active service on the road. Mr. Foley was born at Whitby, Ontario, and began work as section man on the Grand Trunk when only fifteen years old, and has held various positions on the various divisions of the road. He came to Portland and this end of the road twenty-seven years ago.

The tables were more than filled at the chicken pie supper given in connection with the fair of the Ladies' Social Union at the Universalist church Tuesday, and the supper was fully worth the price. There was also a good audience for the program. One feature of this was the farce, "The Teeth of the Gift Horse," which was well played by the young people. There were also several musical numbers, including selections by the Sunday School orchestra, a piano solo by Miss Marion Wheeler, a duet by Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Conant, selections by the Harmony Male Quartet, Messrs. Harry Conant, Roy Conant, Fuller and Titus, and by a ladies' quartet, Mrs. Edith Wheeler, Mrs. Carroll Wilson, Mrs. Agnes Perkins and Mrs. Stella W. Burnham. The sale department had only a fair patronage.

A letter was received at the Democrat office last week from J. M. Bryant, superintendent of the National Cemetery at Little Rock, Arkansas, and a one time resident of this village, with a check to extend his subscription to the Oxford Democrat for another year. Subjoined to the business part of the letter is the following: "The weekly arrival of this paper is anticipated with pleasure. It is the earliest paper of which I have any remembrance, and I expect to be a reader of it as long as I have any eyes to read with. In forwarding my subscription last year I wrote you a letter making inquiries relative to the town of Woodstock. This letter you printed in full but no answer to my inquiries has been received, and an interrogation point remains in my mind relative to the matter. As the next national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Portland, Me., I expect to enjoy the pleasure of visiting once more my native birthplace."

The Seneca Club.

The next meeting of the Seneca Club will be held next Monday, March 17, at the usual hour with Mrs. Alice Allen and Mrs. Eva Ordway hostesses. The meeting will be devoted to American literature, and the roll call will be answered by the names of American authors. Three papers will be read as follows:

Paper—Contemporary American Fiction, Mrs. Frank Taylor
Paper—Contemporary American Poetry, Mrs. Florence Haskell
Book Review—Mrs. Eva Howard

The ladies run this excerpt at the head of their program as their appreciation of literature:

"The study of literature nourishes youth, entertains old age, adorns prosperity, solaces adversity, is delightful at home and unobtrusive abroad."

Mostly "Passed Over the Article."

VILLAGE CORPORATION MEETING DOES LITTLE BUT ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Officers of South Paris Village Corporation elected Tuesday evening, March 4:

Moderator—Alton C. Wheeler.
Clerk—Edwin N. Haskell.
Assessors—Robert E. Shaw, Ransom D. Gould, O. K. Clifford.
Treasurer—Charles H. Howard.
Collector—Harry M. Shaw. Compensation, one per cent on amount collected.
Chief Engineer—Charles W. Bowker.
First Assistant Engineer—Harry I. Lowell.
Second Assistant Engineer—Wm. G. Cushman.
Member of Water Commission for three years—Alton C. Wheeler.

The appropriations:

Street lighting	$1,600 00
Care of parks	225 00
Paris Public Library	500 00
Fire department	700 00
Water and hydrant rental	2,000 00
Police	200 00
Miscellaneous bills	700 00
Interest charges	75 00
Care of clock, Deering Memorial Church	12 00
	$6,012 00

A gathering of men and women voters which packed the Odd Fellows' banquet hall at the annual meeting of South Paris Village Corporation Tuesday evening displayed a lively animation in such election contests as there were. For the rest of the time they mainly sat quietly and allowed the election of officers to go on uncontested, transacted the rest of the routine annual business with very little discussion, and with not lengthy consideration disposed of most of the suggested innovations and new business, where an appropriation was involved, by passing over the article with some enthusiasm.

The program opened with a contest for moderator, Alton C. Wheeler being elected by 75 votes to 50 for Walter L. Gray, and one scattering. From then on through the list of officers until water commissioner was reached, the election proceeded rapidly in the strictest of routine, only a single ballot being cast in each instance. The former officers were elected except that Ransom D. Gould as assessor succeeds Donald P. Chapman, who did not desire a re-election.

The term of Alton C. Wheeler as a member of the water commission expired this year, and he was re-elected for a term of three years by 109 votes to 33 for O. K. Clifford.

Temporary loans by the treasurer were authorized, to an amount not exceeding $3,000 00.

Under the article relative to installing a fire alarm system, A. F. Goldsmith, chairman of the committee, made a report showing that a complete system with twelve boxes would cost about $8,500 00, further information increasing somewhat the figures which were given in the committee's statement published in last week's Democrat. A representative of the Gamewell Co. was present, and spoke briefly when called upon and answered some questions which were propounded. There was a little earnest though by no means violent discussion pro and con, and then a motion to pass over the article was carried by an unmistakable preponderance of sound in a viva voce vote.

The assessors were instructed to place four additional lights in the Oxford Park section. This action was taken without division after a resident of the Park had made the motion and suggested that now the property owners of the Park are paying corporation taxes, they are entitled to lights.

The article relating to additional lights on High Street brought out no advocates, and was promptly passed over.

Not so promptly though just as effectively the article relating to lighting Market Square was passed over. Ralph R. Butts of the committee presented a communication from the Central Maine Power Co., suggesting a system of lighting for the Square which the company would install without expense, which would cost for power about $940 per year more than the present system. There were voices on both sides when the vote was taken, but the motion to pass over was decisively carried.

On the article relative to the exemption of taxes on property which receives no benefit from water protection or lights, E. E. Chapman said that he felt that the Methodist church should not have to pay for water. That article too was passed over.

A committee of five was authorized to draft ordinances for automobile traffic and parking, to report to a later meeting of the corporation. The moderator later named as this committee Earl W. Farnham, H. L. Fogg, Harry L. Conant, Leroy W. Titus, Byron W. Tuttle.

A committee of three was also authorized to adjust the salaries of the various officers of the corporation, and report to a later meeting. The compensation of the fire engineers, which has usually been fixed by the meeting, was left to be referred to this committee. As the committee the moderator later appointed George W. Richardson, Charles O. Barrows, Percy M. Walker.

Under the park appropriation, H. W. Dennison had urged that the addition at the south end of Moore Park should be improved, and had also called attention to the fact that there is a fountain in the park which has had no water in it for four years. On his motion under the last article in the warrant, the superintendent of water works was instructed to see that there is water in the fountain during the summer months, when water supply conditions permit.

The meeting adjourned about nine o'clock, after a session of an hour and a half.

Twin Town Nature Club.

The Twin Town Nature Club was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Park last Monday evening. Hostesses were Mrs. Harriette Barnes, Lida Fletcher, Bessie Pierce, Helen Shaw, Ethel Young and Ernest Crockett.

A very interesting program consisted of the following: Piano solo, Miss Nellie Jackson, paper Common Bird Migration Mrs. Bessie Pierce, Stanley Perham of West Paris gave a talk on Bird Nests, their construction and location. He had ten specimens for exhibition.

Deep thinking was required on the part of all in the next feature of program. Each Norway member had come representing either a tree or flower, and those from South Paris as a bird. A great deal of originality was displayed.

Thirty-eight members and eight visitors were present. Eleven new names were accepted for membership.

The first bird walk will be Saturday, March 29, meeting at Park Street bridge at 1:30 P. M.

The club bird list now numbers 28.

PARAGRAPHS FOR THE NEW ENGLANDER

News of General Interest From the Six States

All the old-age pension bills which have been before the Massachusetts social welfare committee this year have been referred to the next annual election. A special commission is studying the subject and will not report until next January.

Mrs. Winifred McNamara, one of the oldest women in Massachusetts, died at the home of her son in Taunton, Mass., John J. McNamara in her 103rd year. Sixteen years ago she suffered a fractured hip and had been confined to the house since.

An unfair dispute between a big buck deer weighing 175 pounds and a Boston & Maine westbound passenger train in the east yard, Fitchburg, Mass., for the right of way, ended disastrously for the buck. In addition to having its horns torn out of its head, the neck was broken.

Myron Griffin of Pike, N. H., shot and killed himself with an army rifle at the home of Ludwig Link in Springfield, Vt. Griffin, who formerly lived in Cavendish, was at liberty on $2000 bonds furnished after he had pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court to a charge of assault on his wife's sister, Helen Murray of Ludlow.

As a result of one of a most peculiar accident, Charles Shorey of Fitchburg, Mass., a retired railroad engineer, was taken to the Burbank Hospital with a broken leg. When he crossed his legs to put on his rubbers the femur bone in his right leg snapped and examination showed it was fractured.

For cruel treatment of his 13-year-old son Peter, who told the police his father made him walk on tacks and beads as a punishment, Stanley Roodzvin of North End, Boston, was sentenced to six months in the house of correction. Roodzvin appealed the sentence but was ordered to go to jail on a one month's suspended sentence for non-support.

Although he was receiving $10,000 a year as executive secretary of the New York University Alumni and was offered $5000 more if he would remain on the job, Howard Langland gave up his opportunity for material success to become a brother in the Catholic Foreign Missionary Society. He will sail for China in a short while to begin missionary work.

Wilson of Sacramento, Calif., through a decision of the California Supreme Court. The fortune consists of 500 acres of fertile California soil, and thousands of dollars in bonds and negotiable securities.

Production of nitrogen compounds from the air has been made far more economical and efficient by a recent important chemical discovery at the fixed nitrogen research laboratory at Washington, according to Prof. Arthur B. Lamb, Harvard chemist, who was head of this government laboratory during and for a while after the war. The new process yields 14 per cent of ammonia in comparison with the German satalyst of 7 and 8 per cent perfected just before there were thoughts of war in the Rhineland, according to Prof. Lamb, and the improvement is largely due to Alfred T. Larson, a former Harvard graduate student, who has been studying this and similar subjects during the war and afterwards.

Figures announced for the State of Maine by the United States Department of Commerce are of particular interest to the members of the Maine committee appointed to investigate the tax exemption laws of the State. This Federal report announced that all classes of property in the State increased in value from 1912 to 1922 and the estimated value of exempt real property increased in that period from $39,228,000 to $87,725,000 or 123.6 per cent. State Auditor Elbert D. Hayford, chairman of the Maine Investigation Board, says he is a loss to know from what sources the figures were obtained to exempt real property. It is his opinion that it will be shown to be much larger.

The reason so many of the 24,000,000 farmers in this country are going out of business is because they cling to the American tradition of individuality and refuse to organize, Senator Capper of Kansas declared in addressing the annual banquet of the Eastern States Farmers' Co-operative Exchange held at Springfield, Mass. "When the farmer sells," he said, "he sells to an organized market—a market organized to take speculative profits. When he goes into the market to buy, he buys from an organized market

Here and There.

Girls may think they have the center of the stage at all times; but there are periods when old ladies have their innings. Grandma can sit in the corner until she becomes a centenarian, but then she is wined, dined and bouqueted; and every year she adds to one hundred adds also to the profusion of the above mentioned things. An old lady has been discovered within the last week or two that divides honors with King Tut. Her coffin was not quite so good, but then she did not need one. It was a case of "beauty unadorned." This old lady lived in the vicinity of Galway, Ireland, where she made porridge and heart ache (probably) three thousand years ago. The old lady is not alive, but she has left the best preserved skeleton of any woman of her time. From it one must come to the conclusion she had back bone, and could talk a little more vigorously than any woman of the present day. At any rate she had a square jaw quite different from any owned by modern women, and teeth one can hear grit even now. Near the body were ancient bronze ornaments. It is thought they find will contribute something to unrecorded Irish history.

Oil and oil lands are making a good deal of trouble nowadays. The Lord, when he set the oil a-brewing, confined it in certain receptacles, which are not always proof against expansion; at least teapots are not, as has been recently demonstrated; but this is not the first trouble in oil that has caused an explosion. The oil wells of Persia caused a bigger explosion than the "Teapot Dome." Indirectly, they may have caused that recent explosion known so well—the world war They are not done exploding, and are causing international troubles. In fact, Persia may have been the first oil scandal in the world. Herodotus said the stuff was there in his day, and Zoroaster said Persia was a "land of fire." It seems the altar fires in the temples were kept burning with petroleum, and who knows what monopoly and graft there may have been in this concession.

A man or woman does not have much use for anything smaller than a dime in his transactions nowadays. Any man can arrive at that conclusion with a little thought on his transactions, but if he wants any stronger evidence he has it in the records of the Philadelphia mint. That institution coined dimes almost continuously during the past year. It coined a greater number of these small silver pieces in 1923 than ever before, the exact number being 50,130,000. The institution minted in all denominations during 1923, 201,650,000 separate coins, their values and varieties being as follows: double eagles (gold), 566,000, value $11,320,000; silver dollars, pieces, 30,800,000, value $30,800,000; quarter dollars, pieces, 9,716,000, value, $2,429 000; dimes, pieces, 50,130,000, value $5,013,000; 5 cent pieces (nickel), 35,715,000, value $1,785,750; 1 cent pieces (bronze), 74,723,000, value $747,230.

There is the old saw which says that when the skies fall one may catch white blackbirds; but it seems the sky does not have to fall to catch white crows; but they don't catch them very often. It is a commonly accepted idea that crows turn white in far northern regions, and crows with dudish propensities occasionally sport white feathers with us; but a pure albino crow is rarely seen. One was, however, captured alive a few days ago in Denver, Colo. It is believed to be the only white crow to be captured alive. A few have been found dead. The bird is pure white without a black feather on him and in perfect health. It has even albino eyes.

Oh, dear me suz! Hudson Maxim wants to out-Volstead Volstead! He not only wants to deprive farmers of apple juice and others of home brew, but old ladies of that cheering cup of tea, and common "soaks" of their coffee. He thinks tea and coffee can be claimed as intoxicants within the meaning of the Volstead act. Somehow Hudson is peeved and threatens to bring legal action against those who sell and those who serve these beverages,—at least that is what he told the Free Thinkers' Society in New York the other night.

People in these United States use tons of stamped paper. Last year 2,721,000,000 pieces were made at Dayton, O. This lot included 1,236,000,000 plain stamped envelopes, 1,434,000,000, with return card printed in the upper left-hand corner, and 50,000,000 newspaper wrappers. It cost the government $1,300,000 to have these printed.

It has been a foreign estimate of Americans that the most prominent thing about us is the dollar sign. This criticism seems to be growing,—at any rate foreign made typewriters have recently added the dollar sign to their keyboards.

Replacement value of the high school building is estimated at $25 000. Insurance about $12,000 The fire is believed to have started around the chimney, where it has caught twice before in the last few years. A building containing valuable lumber was burned belonging to Charles Oldham, also an icehouse of his was partially destroyed. His loss is estimated at $1,000. Good work on the part of the fire fighters saved all other surrounding buildings. At 2:45 A. M. the fire was under control. Books were immediately telegraphed for by members of the teaching force, and high school began in Grange Hall Wednesday. The grade schools began Thursday in a building once used as a store. It was said years ago that "something was rotten in Denmark." The waves of rancid "naval oil" coming from Washington would indicate that something was rotten there. Attorney General Dougherty and others whose garments smell badly of oil, are entitled to a hearing before executive mandate is issued. President Coolidge may be relied upon for calmness and courage.

It gives us much pleasure to know that our Maine members of Congress, so far, have no taint of bad odors in that body. Coolidge and our Fernald should be kept there, and probably will be.

Last week was "canned foods week", and was set apart as such by some of our grocers, who made displays of canned goods in their windows. This is the third annual event of the kind. Canned goods during the past half century, have become a staple in food products. Everybody indulges in these kinds of goods. The winter used to be hard on humans. The salted diet brought on scurvy; and to rid one's self from the effects of such living a large dose of sulphur and molasses had to be administered in the spring; but now they take canned "gardensass" instead. The Indians used to track a white man by the twigs he broke in going through a forest. If the Indian was on his job today he would track him by the tin cans left behind him. If a man wants to take an overland trip he loads up Henry with canned soups etc. If you want to know the size of his cargo look at the "tin can" parks along the way. Canned foods have made life endurable in Alaska and Greenland. Whale's blubber doesn't go so badly if one can have canned asparagus to eat with it. It also robs Sahara of its dangers. Nicholas Appert, a Frenchman, is said to have discovered how to can food under spur of a prize offered by Napoleon Bonaparte. When one goes into a wilderness and sees a pile of used tin cans he can say here is a monument to one of the greatest benefactors of the human race—Appert. Well, why not have a tin can week.

Frederick W. Allen.

After long suffering with an internal cancer, Frederick W. Allen died Saturday morning at his residence on Skillings Avenue, South Paris. Some weeks since he went to the hospital, where an examination was made, which showed that an operation would be likely to result fatally, and he returned home. Some apparent improvement in his condition afterward did not prove permanent.

Mr. Allen was the son of J. Q. Allen and the late Ada (Cunwell) Allen, and was 43 years of age at the time of his death. He was never married. For some time he had run a battery service station on Skillings Avenue, also repairing lawn mowers and doing other similar work.

He is survived by his father, J. Q. Allen, who has been with him during his illness, one brother, Herbert L. Allen of Woodstock, and one sister, Eva, wife of Harry Dudley of South Paris. Two other sisters have died.

The funeral at one o'clock Monday afternoon was attended by Rev. Chester Gore Miller. Burial will be in Norway Pine Grove Cemetery.

Paris Grange.

A very interesting meeting was held by Paris Grange Saturday, March 1st, with about 140 present. The men proved that they can get dinner. Worthy State Master Abbott, State Secretary Libby and State Chaplain Morse were present. Eleven granges were represented, and good reports were given from all. An invitation was accepted to go to Hebron March 12, and for Paris degree team to confer the third and fourth degrees. On account of sickness and various reasons it will be impossible to get the team in working shape, and it has been decided impossible to confer the degree. It is hoped that a good attendance will go to Hebron just the same.

The next meeting will be held Saturday, March 15, at 10:30 Mrs. Kate Ellis, a state deputy, is expected to speak; also Mrs. Mae Robinson, secretary of New Century Pomona. Mrs. Curtis' side will furnish the program in the afternoon. All who are not solicited for the dinner are requested to bring pastry.

Expensive Hands.

No. 16, that is the express for Portland, was a little late Thursday night, and there was quite a crowd of passengers to wait for it at the South Paris station. Quite a number of them were drummers, who had been doing the towns of Paris and Norway. Some of them were old timers, with only memories of the past, and some of them were young, trying to create memories. There is a kind of fraternal attachment among drummers—they all belong to the gang—and talk as freely to each other as Dwig's school boys in his cartoons.

When they were comfortably seated and cigarettes lighted, so time would pass quickly, they began to look at each other to see what they could put over. After a few puffs one of them addressed the company with:

"Say; do you know what Bill (never mind what his other name is) has been doing over in Norway to-day?"

None of them seemed to know, and all of them seemed ready to know.

"He has been paying a premium on dance tickets. The Hello Girls over there are getting up a leap year ball, and they picked out Bill for an easy mark. He paid seventy-five cents for a ticket he can't use. The tickets are not worth anything, for I saw the same girl give one away to another fellow."

"Well," said Bill, "it was worth seventy-five cents to hold her hand for a minute."

"Well, it was lucky you did not have to hold it an hour at that rate," put in an older member who had soured on such things.

Another member who had been looking at Bill's hands added this contribution to the conversation:

"Say, Bill, you didn't hold her hand with that dirty paw, did you?"

"Yes," said Bill dismally. "I should have washed it if I had known what was ahead of me. But that is not the worst of it. I can't wash it now she has held it. Got to carry it in this shape to the grave!"

Just at this point Sixteen whistled for Nichols Crossing and all made a scramble for bags; but one of the men made a last dig at Bill.

"What you going to do with that ticket?" he said.

"Oh, I've got a fool's gallery on the side of my room and I'm going to hang this up with the other exhibits."

Mrs. Emma L. (Bennett) Hammond.

Funeral services of Mrs. Emma L. (Bennett) Hammond, widow of Geo. R. Hammond, who died at her home north of Paris Hill Sunday, March 2, were held Wendesday at 1:30 P. M., attended by Rev. C. G. Miller of the South Paris Universalist church.

Mrs. Hammond was born in Buckfield Sept. 23, 1844, the daughter of George O. and Augusta (Cole) Bennett, and was united in marriage to Mr. Hammond Dec. 12, 1869. She is survived by four children, Mrs. Augusta E. Hamblin of Paris, Albert M. Hammond of Paris, Mrs. Agnes M. Davis of Mechanic Falls, and John R. Hammond of Paris, also one granddaughter, Miss Zilpha A. Slattery of Mechanic Falls, and two sisters and one brother, Mrs. E. F. Bicknell of Watertown, Conn., Frank Bennett of Paris, and Miss Lena Bennett of Portland, besides several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Hammond was a great sufferer for many years. After Mr. Hammond's death she was cared for by her children, being most tenderly cared for in her final illness by her son John and wife, who own the homestead place.

Only a few days of the March weather we have been getting in the past week will be needed to start bare spots, but still the wood and lumber are coming in. Rarely has there been so good a winter for teaming, and it is many years since so much lumber has come into the village in one winter.

A Tasty Chicken Tale.

After reading several magazine articles on canning chicken, I am impelled to give my own experience.

We raise our own chickens, and in the fall select those we intend keeping through the winter, and shut the others up for about ten days, keeping food always before them; they have no food for twelve hours before killing, but always plenty of clean water to drink. This results in the crop being nearly, if not quite, empty by morning. They are killed, dressed, drawn and hung in a cool place. The next morning they are cut up the same as for fricasseeing, except that the breast is cut into three pieces, and the tips of the wings and long part of the legs removed.

The cans are sterilized and the chickens packed into them, leaving out the neck and back pieces, which are cooked and used fresh, there being too little meat on them to make it worth while to can them. A fowl or chicken, weighing three and one-half or four pounds, will go into a quart can nicely.

After the chickens are all in the cans a teaspoonful of salt is put in the top of each can; they are then filled with hot not boiling water, rubbers and lids put on, and the first wire put in place. The cans are then put into the canner—a small boiler kept for this purpose—with hot water to not quite cover them. As soon as the water begins to boil the blaze is turned down, so that the water boils nicely, but not rapidly. Four hours for old fowls and three for young ones give satisfactory results. When the time is up, the cans are removed from the boiler, the second wire adjusted and the cans placed to cool, out of a draft.

I have canned chicken this way for several years, and never have lost a can. The beauty of this method is twofold: first, it is so little work; and second, we have as delicious fried chicken as we ever ate, and at very short notice. When it is to be used for frying, the cans needed are placed on the hot shelf of the range, or in a pan of fairly hot water—first loosening the top—and when the liquid surrounding the chicken has melted—it is a firm jelly, when opened—it is carefully poured off, and by using care in removing from the can, the pieces come out in nice shape; they are put in a cold place to firm, dipped in flour or egg and crumbs and fried in deep fat, very dry.

At a "stag" dinner I gave my husband one January, the guests were enthusiastic over the fried chicken and corn-on-the-cob, and thought my husband was trying to fool them when he said that both were canned at home.

I find that by hanging the chickens in a cold place for twenty-four hours all the animal heat is out, and none of the sweetness is lost.

If the liquid that is poured off is not used for gravy, it will make two or three servings of delicious chicken broth or soup. Of course for creamed chicken or chicken pie this liquid is all used.

The neck pieces and backs are used without canning, and make a good meal, even though there is not much meat on either.

I am convinced by long experience that the shorter the process, and the less handling meats and poultry receive, the better the finished product.

If one does not raise chickens, I think it practical to purchase for canning; watch the market and buy of a trustworthy poultryman, preferably one who raises his own.

The Magic Touch That Transforms.

It is one of my pet theories that wonders can be accomplished with everyday things, a theory that I have had to put into practice often in order to make my surroundings livable for myself, and pleasing to my friends. I had special need of it when I moved into that house on Wheeler Street.

It seemed utterly commonplace, and simply hopeless. There was a hideous porch; distinction and dignity were wholly lacking; it was dingy, unattractive and neglected looking when we moved into it. Not picturesquely neglected or romantically weatherbeaten, but just common and hopeless, almost apologetic among its more distinctive-looking neighbor houses. To me it looked almost pleading—that settled me. It seemed to say to me, "Make me what you will, I have been waiting for you a long time."

That was what I saw when the Man and I inspected the house. He saw only the commonplace, and almost disreputable house. "A good neighborhood, to be sure, but how did that thing get here?" said he to me.

"Let's look at it," I suggested. "What can you see in that thing?" he queried, for he knew I was always seeing things. We looked at it, and found there were just two things in favor of it. One, I have already mentioned, was the neighborhood, and the other was the price, it was absurdly cheap.

Well, we bought it. We studied it a while, and then we transformed it. We ripped off the hideous porch, and replaced it by a quaint colonial doorway with a brass knocker. We made gay little window boxes, with red geraniums in summer, and little perky evergreens in winter. We laid a brick floor before the doorway, and gave it the gracious effect of a terrace.

At the side we made a pergola-like sun porch with a brick floor, and built-in seats along the sides. Quick-growing vines made this very summery looking, and gave it charm and us seclusion. We gave the house a coat of white paint, and after the vines had grown, and the flowers were all in bloom, and we sat out amid the cool seclusion of our screened-in pergola, and as the admiring comments of passers-by floated in to us, now and then, we felt that we had achieved a triumph.

The interior received its rejuvenating and modernizing treatment too. The wide-boarded old floor was deaned of its cheapening shiny coats of varnish; it must have had several coats, for it took a powerful lot of varnish remover to bring back its old-time simplicity; then we restored old-time beauty by applying wax until it glowed deep and lustrous.

We cut a wide doorway and placed some French doors to give light to a dark room, and also to enable us to throw two rooms into one if so desired.

Oh, how we worked and schemed to make that place over—to make it beautiful. The joy we had in transforming the place, and the fun we had. Making that house over was for me more fun than anything I had done for years, and when it was done I felt as if it were ours in more than the sense of possession—it was ours because it reflected our personality.

And the furnishing of it; creating a thousand-dollar-living-room effect with old furniture and stain, and a bit of old tapestry and Chinese embroidery, some bowls and candlesticks and cotton cretonnes, that gave the impression of being brocade.

When the house was re-oriented, inside and out, we had a housewarming. Our friends asked us how we had been able to find such a jewel of a house. The Man looked at me and laughed. "Where did we find it? She just saw it, and I couldn't, although I was looking right at it. She had the Magic Touch."!

Chili Con Carne.

Cut into pieces, as for fricassee, one chicken weighing about four pounds. Season each piece with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and quickly brown the outside in a little fat in a very hot pan. Boil six large, red peppers until soft, and press through a colander—the peppers should be cored before cooking. Put through the food chopper two small onions, two or three cloves of garlic, or chives may be substituted for these, and one-fourth a cup of capers. Add this mixture to the browned chicken in a stew-pot, cover with water or stock, and let simmer for half an hour or until the chicken is tender. Before serving thicken the liquid with six tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed smooth with butter or four tablespoonfuls of a substitute, and season the whole with salt to taste.

An old chiffonier is a handy thing to have in the kitchen. Have one drawer for caps and aprons, another for towels and holders, a third for jelly bags, etc.

On "Passing Over the Article."

During this month the citizens of our country towns are extensively engaged in the great indoor New England pastime of "passing over the article." The matter is here commented upon from the parliamentary point of view, and not upon the merits of the question as to whether passing over the article is wise or proper. That depends upon the article. It may be wise to pass over, and it may be unwise, but it is a safe guess that in a large fraction of the cases it is wise. The ex-legislator who brings home as a souvenir his bulky file of documents of the session, has in them evidence of the good work done by the legislature as shown in the volume of the proposed laws that were not passed.

To get back to "passing over the article," all New England country residents know that this is the form of action taken in town meeting to dispose of an article in the warrant which is not favored. A group of near-experts in parliamentary law were a few days since debating upon the status of the motion to pass over the article. One of these years ago wrote to the late Hon. Asher C. Hinds, the noted parliamentarian, asking him about the motion, and received the reply that that form of motion was not known in general parliamentary law and probably would not be found in use outside of New England. It is essentially a town meeting motion, and New England is the birthplace and the home of the town meeting, and about the only part of the country where that embodiment of pure democracy still exists in its original form.

This may be rather a voluminous introduction to bring to the opinion on which the group cited above were practically agreed. This opinion was that under some conditions the motion to pass over has the right of way over other motions. In the rough and tumble of town meeting, it is frequently the case that when an article is laid before the meeting by the moderator there come at once from different parts of the hall two or three distinct motions, one of which is the motion to pass over. In the transactions of an organized legislative body, a member is required to rise and address the presiding officer before he can present a motion, but in town meeting some of these niceties are not usually observed.

In such a case, it seemed to be agreed, it would be at least good sense, if not good parliamentary practice, to single out the motion to pass over and give it precedence over the other motions. If the sentiment of the meeting is in favor of no action on that article, the passage of the motion to pass over disposes of it finally. If that motion is defeated, the matter is still before the meeting for affirmative action of some kind. This would be the simplest form of procedure.

The moderator of a town meeting has to be governed somewhat by his own good horse sense, as well as by the books and precedents, and it would be of some interest to know how this matter is generally regarded.

About the State.

Constance Bowes of Thomaston has been made organist of the beautiful new pipe organ recently installed at the college of Secretarial Science of Boston University where she is a freshman. Besides playing for chapel every day and assembly once a week Miss Bowes also is to accompany the college orchestra of about 20 pieces in their practice and concerts.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stowe of Dover have an interesting cat which has traveled over 8000 miles with them. At their stopping places when let out of her box, she will trot after them like a dog. As soon as she arrives home, she goes at once to the stable where she had hunted mice, and begins her search at the same old places as if only a few days had passed since she had been there.

BLISTERING RAYS
that never reach your house!

BEAUTIFUL, bright days are ruinous to ordinary house paint. The sun's ardent rays blister and crack the surface. Then rain comes pelting in. Moisture seeps in every opening—every break. And moisture carries decay.

But those blistering rays will never harm your house if you paint it with

SUN-PROOF PAINT

Sun-Proof will stand between your house and the burning sun. It is elastic—it contracts and expands with the weather—it is non-porous—no moisture can get in.

Now is the time to be thinking of painting. Think now of the protection that Sun-Proof can best give your home. It is a Pittsburgh Proof Product.
